The Daily Courant.

Friday, July 2: 1714.

Paris, July 6.

THE Negotiations in the Congress at Baden do not go altogether as People here expected: They argue from the Advices we have from thence, that the Emperour's Plenipotentiaries seek to draw things into Length, and complain that according to those Advices the Imperialists multiply Difficulties about the Manner of restoring the Elector of Bavaria, that they will neither own the King of Spain nor the King of Sicily, and that in Consequence they will not admit the Ministers of either to the Conferences; lastly, That they insist strenuously on the Preservation of the Catalonians, whom in the mean while he encourages all he can to hold out. Some are also of Opinion, that as there are several Lords at the Court of Madrid, who have Estates in Catalonia, they labour no less under-hand for the Conservation of the Privileges of that Principality, than those who are actually in Arms for that Cause. The Chancelour Pontchartrain has at length resigned the Seals: 'Tis not said for what Reason, but 'tis thought to be something more than a Desire to withdraw from Business and to live quiet: 'Tis said he would needs take upon him to argue about the Reception of the the Pope's Bull, and other Matters that he deemed Impositions and Abuses, which rendred him troublesome to a Court that will not be reasoned with or comptrolled. The Bishop of Montpellier has written to the King, that he cannot receive the Pope's Bull, either as he is a Christian, or a Frenchman, or the King's Servant, and yet much less as he is a Bishop. Order is sent to the Bishops not to write any more Pastoral Instructions or other Letters on this Subject. We talk of a new Commission for marine Affairs, and that the Count de Toulouse is to be at the Head of it. M de la Houffaye, Counsellour of State and Intendant of Alsace, is to succeed M. de Voisin, the new Chancelour, as Secretary of State. 'Tis observed that the new Alterations made are very agreeable to the Jesuites, and that Power is lodged in the Hands of Persons who are well affected to those Fathers as well as to the present Government. The Marshal de Villeroy is arrived at Lyons; 'tis reported that the Mayor offering to accompany him about the Town, the Populace threw Stones at him, and obliged him to retire into his House: 'Tis also rumoured, that the People of Lyons have shut their Gates against the Troops which the said Marshal would have introduced into it, of which we must wait the Confirmation by the first Letters from thence.
